INTRODUCTION

The 1983 annual statistics report has undergone a number of revisions in content and style of presentation. We in "Statistics" have attempted to adhere to a number of requests for changes to this document, in order for the users to more easily interpret the figures herein. Major changes are as follows:

- All reference to revenue and expenditure have been deleted.
- A summary section entitled "Provincial Trend Summaries" has been added, in an attempt to provide a more meaningful perspective for the current year statistics.
- The camping statistics do not include campground occupancy information, nor origin statistics.
- The previous format of presenting information by Departmental Region has been changed. The use information for all sites is now arranged by category (i.e. provincial parks, recreation sites, campgrounds, picnic grounds).
- More information is available for the northern sites the department now administers.

Any questions concerning this report can be directed to either Sharon Coffin (565-2478) or Sharon Morin (565-2839).

1983 Summary

During the 1983 summer season, vehicle entries at our provincial parks, recreation sites, campgrounds and picnic grounds decreased approximately 8% from the 1982 season. Poor weather conditions through the beginning of the season was reflected in lower visitation during May and June. Visitation to the 17 provincial parks alone decreased only slightly (2%) overall. Duck Mountain Park recorded the highest visitation since 1979, a 20% increase over 1982. Greenwater, Saskatchewan Landing and The Battlefords Provincial Parks each recorded significant increases in park entry over the 1982 season (20%, 18% and 12% respectively). Moose Jaw Wild Animal Park and McBride Lake Recreation Site both experienced significant increased visitation over 1982 (29% and 85%, respectively). Coldwell Park and Delaronde (Zig Zag Bay) both have recorded slight increases in visitation consistently over the past three years, as have Turtle Lake and Woody River.

Overall park entry permits issued reflected a corresponding 2% decrease from 1982 figures; however, the free senior citizen entry permits increased 10% at the 19 locations where entry permits are required. More seniors visited our parks than ever before at over 30,000 entries. Also during 1983, the previous pattern of increases in the number of seasonal entry permits issued was sharply arrested with a decline of 27%. Seasonal entry permits increased $5 in price in 1983 (50% increase).

Camping activity increased significantly throughout the province, the greatest increase in 5-years (permit-days).

Campers may be making fewer trips, but staying longer. The average length of stay increased from 1.7 days in 1982, to 2.3 days in 1983. Certainly, the introduction of the reserve-a-site program in 1983 at seven locations influenced the length of stay. The program enabled campers to plan holidays in advance and be assured of having a campsite upon arrival. On average, the reservation campers stayed twice as long as regular campers (4.2 days). The reservation program was most popular at Buffalo Pound Park where reservation campers generated one-fifth of the total camping activity for that park.

A camper self-registration program was also introduced during the 1983 season where campers pay their camping fees without the help of campground staff. Generally, the program was very successful both in terms of camper compliance in paying their fees, and acceptance of doing this on their own. Over 7,000 permit days were generated through this program at eight campgrounds, with an average length of stay of 2.2 days.

Occupancy rates for the rental accommodation available at Duck Mountain, Cypress Hills, Greenwater and Moose Mountain Parks has remained fairly constant over the 4-month summer period (May through August) for the past four years at an average of just over 70%, overall.

Visitors participating in organized activities through programs offered at our parks increased 12% over 1982. Aquatic, interpretive and recreational park programs offered throughout our provincial parks during the 1983 season generated participation by more than 75,000 park visitors in hundreds of structured programs such as crafts, campfires, stay times, park tours, films, nature hikes, board sailing and water safety, swim lessons.

The Battlefords Park golf course was the only one of our six golf courses where fees are charged, that indicated an overall increase (6%) in golfing activity. At Valley Centre golf course, purchase of seasonal golf tickets has been increasing steadily the past five years, now ranking third behind Moose Mountain and Duck Mountain in number of seasonals issued.
